PREFACE

The 'face' and 'faces' of this Fourth Edition text for 2008 have changed as the reader will note immediately on viewing our front cover. In the hope of appealing to a broader international readership, we are joined by Olivia Serdarevic (Paris and New York) and Charles McGhee (Auckland, New Zealand). Peter McDonnell (Baltimore) and Ayad Farjo (Ann Arbor) complement our editorship, which seemed an increasingly daunting task involving three continents and our book publisher across the Atlantic. Add in the mix of an older editor (FSB) trying to keep up with the world of multiple contributors, frequently changing e-mail addresses, along with on-line manuscript corrections, and the task seemed overwhelming.

This book arose 22 years ago from an Eye Bank Association of America meeting in San Diego when keratoplasty began to flourish and eye banks created more stringent standards and were led by fellowship-trained corneal surgeons. We trained and were mentored by outstanding corneal surgeons and influenced directly by the likes of Dohlman, Kaufman, Laibson, Fine, Peyton, Polack, Troutman, Maumenee, Castroviejo and indirectly by Paufique and Rycroft among others.

The publication of Krachmer, Mannis and Holland's first and second editions of Cornea stands as a monument to absolutely the best of our current generation of corneal specialists with much to tell us about both the medical and surgical aspects of the diagnosis and treatment of corneal disease. Our mutual publishing company Elsevier suggested that this text should accentuate the surgical aspects of the cornea, and we have achieved this. In doing so we have strived to retain appropriate research chapters which aide our understanding of corneal anatomy and physiology.

This Fourth Edition again utilizes marvelous additional illustrations of Laurel Cook Lhowe to emphasize surgical technique and there is a return to color figures throughout the text. The refractive surgery portion of Cornea Surgery has been extensively revised and lengthened with Section Four reviewing 'Endothelial keratoplasty' and Part Six providing in-depth coverage of 'Surgical Correction of Refractive Errors'. The reader will note the retention of previous edition upgraded chapters such as 'Penetrating Keratoplasty' but the loss of all but one eye-banking chapter. Eye banks under the direction of the Eye Bank Association of America in fact have not disappeared—to the contrary we use them more than ever as they take on additional roles such as processing tissue for lamellar keratoplasty.

So as to not forget the lessons of the past; Peter Laibson, both in his lecture in Chicago two years ago, and in Chapter One of this text, has provided historical perspective on modern day corneal surgery.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

FSB: I want to thank Wanda Jones-Madison for her assistance and perseverance in organizing the Fourth Edition; Ayad Farjo for his extensive knowledge of current ophthalmic literature and help with the new Table of Contents; Courtney Moffatt Brightbill for her loving support and keeping me on track with the computer age; Sharon Nash, Emma Riley and Russell Gabbedy among others at Elsevier; and the editors and contributors to Corneal Surgery for their time and devotion.

AF: It is not often that I have the opportunity to publically acknowledge those who have supported and encouraged me. First of all it has been a distinct pleasure working with Fred Brightbill and the other distinguished editors on this edition. I am deeply grateful to my wife Karin and sons Zayd and Kai for their patience and tolerance and to my brother Qais for his insight and critical commentary. My parents, Anastas and Muna and brothers Laith and Rafal have been a mountain of support. I also wish to thank my mother-in-law, Diane Sletten who left us too soon and husband Rolf Sletten. I have been fortunate to be associated with the Universities of Michigan, Iowa and Wisconsin. My particular thanks goes to my mentors at Michigan: Roger Mayer, Kaz Soong and Alan Sugar; and to my colleagues on the Cornea service at the University of Iowa: John Sutphin and Michael Wagoner.

PM: In my personal and professional development, I have been fortunate to have friends, family and colleagues who have helped me immeasurably. Thanks for Jan, Laura, Peter and Emma for being understanding of the demands of an academic career. Arnall Patz and Stephen Ryan were excellent role models and patient mentors. Arun Patel, Chris Muller, David Pyott, William May, James Mazzo and Bob Butchofsky exemplified effective leadership, and are also people in the field of Ophthalmology that I admire greatly.

CNJM: On a large, wide-ranging endeavor such as this fourth edition one always gratefully recalls the knowledge and skills passed on by mentors, peers and junior staff. I am particularly indebted to my early mentors in ocular pathology, Professor William Lee in Glasgow and Professor Dan Albert in Boston who taught me much about research and academic writing. My clinical career in ophthalmology owes a huge debt to far too many to name individually, but my clinical and surgical skills were molded at key stages by Dr John Williamson and Dr Jeffrey Jay in Scotland and Dr Geoffrey Crawford in Western Australia. Of course many corneal fellows have kept me up to date and have been enthusiastically involved in my various projects over the years and I often feel I have learned as much as I have given on this two way street. Finally, my career and my contribution to this book and other academic activities would have been absolutely impossible without the understanding and loving support of my dear wife Jane.

OS: I want to thank Fred Brightbill for his excellent previous editions; his stamina to complete this edition; and his invitation to include me in this most worthy project.

I also thank my mother and late father whose courage, fortitude, determination, integrity, wisdom and kindness inspired me to both pursue and foster knowledge and innovations for improving life.

DEDICATION

To the researchers, clinicians, teachers and patients—past and present—who have clarified our understanding of cornea and anterior segment function, leading us to remarkable new surgeries for treating disease and improving vision.
